Every year, Free Software Foundation Europe (FSFE) encourages supporters to celebrate Valentine's Day as ?I Love Free Software Day,? a day for supporters to show their gratitude to the people who enable them to enjoy software freedom, including maintainers, contributors, and other activists. It seems appropriate on this holiday to once again address how seeking love on the Internet is, unfortunately, laden with landmines for your freedom and privacy. But today, I'm also going to make the argument that our community should think seriously about developing a freedom-respecting alternative.
